Health and Beauty

This is the season when cold sores or fever blisters are at their height.

It is surprising that cold sores are not more common because most people carry the virus with them all the time.

Natural resistance to this organism is lowered by certain factors, most common of which is the cold, sudden elevation of body temperature, gastrointestinal upsets and over-exposure to sun and wind.

A cold sore starts with a slight itching and burning of the affected area. This becomes more intense. One or more sores will occur — usually about the lips, nose, or other areas where skin and mucous membranes meet.

Most often cold sores dry up on their own. They leave crusts which take about a week to fall off. Discomfort can be relieved by camphorice, menthol or spirits of camphor.

In some few cases, cold sores are so recurrent and numerous that drastic treatment is called for. A doctor should be consulted and given a background picture of the patient's trouble with cold sores. He will probably advise a series of small-pox vaccinations.

Stay away from the use of make-up on the affected area. The straw-colored fluid carries the virus, so be considerate of other people. Never resort to picking a cold sore — this is a good way to get into serious trouble.

ALL-TIME HIGH IN ENROLLMENT REPORTED BY VIRGINIA 4-H'ERS

Four-H club work in Virginia reached an all-time high in 1956, with 67,345 members enrolled in 2,156 clubs. Of this number, 49,927 completed their work.

Dr. W. E. Skelton, head of the 4-H department at VPI, says the club members were enrolled in 106,842 projects. The eight most popular were clothing, foods, electric, safety, garden, livestock, home grounds beautification and health.

In addition to meetings and projects, more club members took part in other 4-H activities than in any previous year. These activities included contests, demonstrations, judging, talent shows, the observances of National 4-H Club Week, achievement days, and Rural Life Sunday. Camps continue to play an increasingly important role in the program. A total of 6,786 members attended the 37 camps held during the summer season.

Dr. Skelton says volunteer leaders continue to make invaluable contributions, and that honors won by club members on a sectional and national basis continue to increase.

Nineteen counties had more than 1,000 members enrolled last year. Top was Franklin with 2,265 white and 318 Negroes. Other counties above the 1,000 mark are: Augusta, Bedford, Campbell, Carroll, Charlotte, Fairfax, Henrico, Greensville, Halifax, Mecklenburg, Henry, Nelson, Patrick, Pittsylvania, Princess Anne, Russell, Tazewell, and Washington.

By G. L. JAMES Farm Agent

Following the policy of special articles on a particular project each year — for 1957, we have chosen an acre of pasture for your study. The recommendations for the acre are as follows:

Choose the site and take samples of the area.

Step 2: Make an application at once to A. S. C. office with Mr. Jennings, ASC Clerk,. This is required for payment on said acre.

Step 3: Follow recommendations based on test for lime —(pH-6 to 6.5) and fertilization, plow or disk area thoroughly and apply 1000 lbs. of 2-12-12 fertilizer and work thoroughly into the soil.

Step 4: Seed area to the following mixture: 3 to 4 pounds of Ladino clover; 3 to 5 pounds of alfalfa; 6 to 6 pounds of Orchard grass. According to Mr. Roy Godsey, Specialist and Mr. John Rogers, Extension Agronomist—farmers should carry two sows, and one six-man team of expert mechanics went to work the minute the pilot of a Lockheed T-33 trainer turned off his Allison J-35 engine. Six minutes, 55 seconds later, the same plane started up again with a new engine. The team, headed by Tech. Sergt. James E. Ware, placed second at Oklahoma City last September in the national engine change competition. The recent change broke the record set in Oklahoma City of a little more than eight minutes.

An appetizing sandwich and sweet plate was served by the hostess, who was assisted by Mrs. Percy Lucado.

POTASH NEEDS OF GRASSES STUDIED AT VPI STATION

How much potash do grasses need for economical growth? That's the question being asked by researchers at VPI Agricultural Experiment Station, who are engaged in some basic studies aimed at helping the farmer get more from his fertilizer dollar.

Coleman Y .Ward, assistant agronomist at the Station, says there is a question as to whether grasses actually need all the potash they absorb. They often show little response to potash fertilizers, but absorb large amounts of the potash from the soil. In contrast, legumes such as alfalfa and ladino clover give large responses to potash fertilizers, but do not absorb potash at the high rate which grasses do.

The results of studies to date indicate that orchard grass takes up more potash than it actually needs. Orchard grass has been found to absorb up to 5 per cent of its weight of potash, yet in so doing did not make appreciably higher yields than orchard grass on lower levels of potash where only 1.5 to 2 per cent of its weight as potash was absorbed.

Ward explains that ladino clover is often penalized when grown with orchard grass (or any grass) because the grass begins growth earlier in the spring and absorbs large amounts of potash. By the time the clover resumes its growth the potash available may be inadequate for good clover growth.

Thus, clover has two strikes against it from the very outset of the growing season. First, there is an inadequate or diminished supply of potash needed for normal growth. Second, since the clover is weakened and resumes growth later in the season, the tall-growing grasses are even more successful in their competition for light, water, and other nutrients.

Ward says these results support field studies of similar findings and have far-reaching pratical application. Basic studies are being conducted on the potash needs of grass-legume mixtures, and they may someday lead to better management practices.

About The Home

By Frances Dell

Trees are certainly the most important feature of any home garden as far as decoration is concerned. They are the background, but are most often treated haphazardly. People sometimes forget that trees have the power to make any house look permanent or temporary.

There is a strong temptation for people who build new houses on bare land to plant too many trees and these too close together. They don't take into consideration that, by doing this, they are defeating the very purpose for which the trees were planted. That is, to grow and provide ornament and shade in the yard.

The best and safest thing for a person who is thinking of investing money in several trees for the yard or thinking of cutting down any trees already growing in the yard is to consult a tree expert or buy a good, well-known book on trees and get down to some serious study on the subject.

For example — too many people do not know that there is a great deal of difference between a Norway maple and a sugar maple. When the facts are known a sugar maple is much more to be desired because it increases in value as it ages, while a twenty year old Norway maple is nothing more than a liability.

Another thing that should be taken into consideration is the size the tree being planted will be when full grown, in scale with the size of the house and property it is to adorn.

On a large property, flowering trees and large shade trees planted in groups are very effective. Where the grounds are small, dwarf trees and shrubs are best.

ALASKAN TOURISTS

An all time peak in tourist travel to the territory was reported in 1956 by the Alaska Visitor's Association, despite absence of American steamship service, which once was the No. 1 tourist carrier. Airlines reported the biggest - ever tourists traffic, while 6,205 vehicles were checked by the Tok Junction customs station on the Alaskan Highway, with more than 17,000 passengers, most of whom were tourists.

1956 BANKRUPTCIES

There were 10,405 business failures in the first ten months of 1956, compared with 9,116 in the same period of 1955, according to a report by Dun & Bradstreet. Liabilities totaled about 30 per cent greater than in 1955. Business mortality was highest among the young establishments — one-fifth of the failing firms being only about a year old. About one-half of the bankruptcies were in retailing.

JOB TOTAL

Employment in December continued at record levels for the month, although the total was lower than in November. As of mid-December, about 64,600,000 Americans were at work. This was 700,000 below the previous month. Non-farm employment increased over the month. The drop in agricultural employment amounted to 1,100,000, reducing the farm work force to a December low of 5,100,000. The non-farm payroll total reached 53,000,000 for the first time.

MARCH DRAFT QUOTA

A draft call for 14,000 men during March has been issued by the Army. The quota is the same as that announced for February. The new call brings to 2,180,430 the total drafted or earmarked for induction since the resumption of Selective Service in September, 1950.

COST OF LIVING RISE

The cost of living, as measured by the Federal Government's consumer price index, gained in 1956 from 114.9 to 117.8 of the 1947-49 base as 100, after holding at about the same level for three years. The all-time high mark was reached in November.

U. S. BUYS LAND

The Federal Government spent more than $63,500,000 for land in 1956, largely because of jet plane and guided missile needs. The Government acquired about the same amount of additional property in 1955, also largely for the same purpose.

Brazil will buy U. S. surplus products under accord.

Farm prices show 6.6 per cent gain for 1956.
